

Market is Hot For Sportfishing Boats

WHEN SW BOATWORKS RECEIVED A COMMISSION to build a tuna-fishing boat for David Carraro, the star of the National Geographic Channel reality show “Wicked Tuna,” the yard produced a winner that’s been turning heads ever since.

Carraro was looking for a stable work platform with plenty of deck and wheelhouse space, along with cutting-edge technology, a 1,000-horsepower Caterpillar, and fishing amenities for commercial trips and charters.

He selected the classic Calvin Beal 44, one of many Calvin Beal and Young Brothers molds carried by SW Boatworks. Since its launch, the boat, named Tuna.com, has been an inspiration in the burgeoning market for sportfishing and tuna-fishing vessels. SW Boatworks receives numerous inquiries and orders, including two recently completed Young Brothers sportfishermen that use design ideas similar to Tuna.com, and three new Calvin Beals now in the pipeline for tuna-fishing.

Tuna.com has provided proof of concept for the downeast design as the perfect platform in this market. Models come in a range of sizes and are customizable to customer wishes. As importantly, the classic styles provide enduring beauty and value for all uses, from workboats to yachts, Coast Guard-approved passenger boats to sportfishermen. SW Boatworks is committed to the idea that each boat is unique and must exceed owner expectations.
